Rachel Morton-Young: Dutch Courage

Expat comedian brings her hilarious tales of life in Amsterdam to the Edinburgh Fringe.

Based in a country famed for sex, drugs and bikes, not always in that order, British comedian, Rachel Morton-Young sets out to prove that living in the Netherlands is so much more than all of those.

In her new solo show "Dutch Courage", Rachel explores the vast chasm between her British roots and her adopted Dutch home. Born and raised in a small, conservative village in the South of England, she provides a humorous insider's perspective on the cultural quirks that define expat life in a country known for its tolerant and liberal culture.

Rachel shares her love for this delightful and quirky country where her grandmother was born and raised, until she was swept off her feet as a young adult by a British soldier during the liberation. Rachel has picked up where she left off, learning the (extremely unsexy) language, embracing strange customs, such as the must-have accessory in the downstairs toilet, accepting the random, original traditions; and is proud to call herself a quarter Dutch!

Known for her friendly, chatty and relatable comedic style, Rachel has firmly established herself as a prominent figure on the English-speaking comedy scene in the Netherlands, regularly producing, hosting and performing comedy shows across the country, as well as teaching stand-up classes. She has featured in various comedy festivals, brought her debut solo show, "Organised Chaos", to the Edinburgh Fringe last year and was awarded Best Stand-up by worldwidecomedyawards.com in 2021.
